ADVERTISING .- The New York Tribune, in a labored article on a reform in trade, gives o'clock at night of the 10th inst., have reachthe following hints, in regard to the item of ed us from Philadelphia: We have little or advertising :-

tising is one of the means by which the re- don't look very bad :form in trade is to be accomplished. The two classes, buyers and sellers, have a common interest in finding each other; that is to say, it is for the interest of him who can supply a certain want cheapest, to have every buyer aware of the fact; and it is for the interest of the buyer no less. An expenditure of fifty thousand dollars may not be too much, one of five thousand may be too little for that purpose. If, for example, somebody has discovered, as we see it stated in a Southern paper, a substance, or chemical compound, which will dispense with the labor now required in washing clothes, or the half of it, at a very small cost, the owner of this patent may spend $50,000 a year in advertising it, and then not spend enough. There are inventions, within our knowledge, worth hundreds of thousands, if the patentees knew how and had the enterprise to bring them home to the knowledge of all interested-by these failings they will never realise twenty thousand. Whoever can supply this city cheapest, with almost any article which will meet a general want hitherto more expensively met, cannot advertise too much if he knows how to advertise at all .-And yet many a dealer in our city pays a thousand dollars more for an eligibly located street, and does not pay a hundred dollars a year for advertising! He willingly pays a thousand dollars, merely to let some ten thousand people know that he has certain articles to sell, but grudges five hundred dollars to give the same knowledge to millions."

From the Scientific Report. There exists a race of men who, according to the report of certain travellers, are originally of the kingdom of Gondar, or of others, who say they inhabit Soudan in the South, whose zoological characteristics are remarkable. They have a tail-like appendage, formed by the elongation of the vertebral column, and they are the last link in the human race. The slave merchants cannot dispose of them without great difficulty, so bad is their reputation. The traits which distinguish them are this race are to be found, also, in the Philipthither by the slave merchants. However
